

ORAL HISTORY INTERVIEW, ASSIGNMENT, AND RELEASE AGREEMENT

This agreement constitutes a release of audio-tapes or digitized recording and any and all rights therein to the J. Willard Marriott Library Special Collections at the University of Utah. The recordings, transcripts, and any accompanying materials and all rights therein will be the property of the Special Collections of the University of Utah, and available without limitation for public use unless restrictions on use are specified below.

The Marriott Library Special Collection's mission is to provide access to special materials in a controlled environment and to ensure that those materials are preserved for the users of the future and are made available to the users of today. The audio-tapes or digitized recordings and accompanying materials (photographs, papers or records, etc.) will be made available for historical, academic research, and other purposes serving the public. Subject to any restrictions set forth below that may be placed on their use by the interviewee and/or interviewer, the recordings and materials will be available for public dissemination, including, without limitation, publication on the World Wide Web (Internet).

A typed transcription of the interview will be given to the interviewee for editing. The interviewee will have a period of sixty days to edit and return the transcription. Beyond the period of sixty days, approval of the transcription is assumed. The interviewee will receive one copy of the edited document upon its completion. The audio recording will not be modified.

We the undersigned have read the above and voluntarily offer the Marriott Library Special Collections of the University of Utah full use of the information contained on these tape or digital recordings and in transcripts of these recordings and the right to reproduce for preservation or dissemination the works in any method now known or hereafter developed. Subject to the restrictions set forth below, if any, we hereby assign all rights, title and interest pertaining to the recordings and accompanying materials to the University of Utah..

This release conforms to the guidelines established by the Oral History Association.
